Going Home

Going Home is a unique blend of news and current affairs, soap opera, comedy, reality television and interactivity. Going Home has been created as a drama or comedy format, capable of high volume production at very low cost. Going Home is a five half hours a week strip. Nothing unusual about that. What is unique is that each episode is written/shot/edited and broadcast the same day. Instant drama. It's never been done before. The show is set entirely on board a commuter train travelling at night. Nine very different characters are going home from work together in the same carriage. Their fictional journey is a lengthy one, but 'edited' to 25 minutes for broadcast

Serving it Up

The cultural arena of the relationship has changed and the genre of dating shows can now reflect this.

Our audiences have been "Sex and the City" they are ready for a dating show that is a social commentary....

A relationship show

Take ten sophisticated singles, over ten themed dinner parties and let the flirt factor rise as they play to win in romance.... A chic, urbane and contemporary take on the age old game of love.

Serving it Up...is a fresh look at the dating reality genre. Using the romance and style of dinner parties as our backdrop, we watch and learn as ten singles play the dating game. We will see which attractions come and go, which relationships build over time and where ultimately as our singles become couples, which ones are real.

The romance of our couples is tested as they compete in one final task, working together to throw a grand finale lavish event. How will they work together as a couple? Does their attraction survive under pressure? Serving It Up gives us that "one more episode" we always wanted to see and allows to really consider the elements of what makes a relationship work.

And the twist: the jilted contestants will get to decide which couple wins.

It's the dinner party you've always wanted to throw and the singles party you won't want to miss.

What's Your Verdict

An innovative new format that reveals the workings of a jury as they re-try real cases. These are no ordinary crimes – they're the cases that gripped a nation, cases in which the outcome has continued to be debated, long after the verdict has been delivered. What's Your Verdict combines dramatic reconstructions, archive footage and studio debate, as these controversial cases are re-tried by a studio jury. Find out what actually happens behind closed doors, when 12 ordinary men and women are called to decide the fate of the accused...
